

The Centre for Transpersonal Psychology (CTP) is a registered charity and a Listing Member of the United Kingdom Council for Psychotherapy (UKCP). Founded in 1973 by Ian Gordon-Brown and Barbara Somers, it has been a driving force in the development of transpersonal psychology in the UK for over 30 years.

CTP is a member of the Humanistic and Integrative Psychology College of the UKCP (HIPC). The Centre's procedures are in accordance with HIPC's guidelines and UKCP requirements.Â

The CTP manages a Therapy Referral Service for members of the public and for health professionals who wish to be put in contact with an Accredited Transpersonal Psychotherapist.
